THE DAILY PROGRESS.

VOL. V. RALEIGH, FRIDAY, AUG. 19, 1864 NO. 140.

A NOTABLE MARRIAGE.

An English paper gives the following account of the marriage of the Count de Paris and the Princess Isabella, granddaughter of Louis Philippe Albert d'Orleans Count de Paris, the eldest hope of the Orleans family, was married to his first cousin, the Princess Isabella of Spain, in the presence of a most illustrious company, including not only the English nobility and foreign ambassadors, but many of the representatives of the old historic names of France, who still adhere in loyalty and affection to the fallen dynasty. The marriage was celebrated in the pretty little Roman Catholic chapel at Kingston, where the Duc de Chartres was married last year, and where many members of the last royal family of France personally attend the service of their faith. As was to be expected then, the marriage at Kingston yesterday was made a gala day for all the country round. Soon after the arrival of the Bishop at the porch, Gaston d'Orleans, Count d'Eu, and Philippe d'Orleans, Duke d'Alencon, the sons of the Duc de Nemours, arrived with their sisters, Princesses Marguerite and Blanche, and followed soon after by the Prince de Conde, son of the Duc d'Aumale, and then by the Princess Christine, the sister of the bride, for there were no bridesmaids at this occasion. The Prince and Princess de Joinville, with the Duc d'Aumale followed almost directly, the Duchess d'Aumale being prevented by indisposition from being present. And now the little church was quite full, and almost on all sides with the rich colors of the ladies' dresses. Just after 10½ o'clock loud cheering was heard without, and there was a long pause of expectation, which was broken at last as, leaning on the arm of a tall, fair young man, a venerable lady came slowly up the church, and all rose and bowed low as they recognized in the aged and feeble Queen, the care-worn features of Marie Amelie, the widow of Louis Phillipe.—There was a feeling of emotion almost amounting to awe with which this queenly relic of a bygone age and time, this living witness and actor amid events for which we of this generation have to read history, was regarded. The young man who supported her tenderly, as she advanced up the church; bowing with queenly self-possession to the reverences of those around, was the bridegroom, her grandson, the Count de Paris. Though 26 years of age, he looks two or more years younger, which is perhaps owing to his fair complexion and light flaxen hair. Certainly he would be counted fair even among Englishmen, and his light mouse-tache and open large blue eyes, reminded one more of our own royal family than the Prince of the House of Orleans. Almost immediately following came the bride. She was clad in white, a soft airy dress resembling a bloom of white flowers, while the massive lace veil which was over her bridal wreath was carried back from her face, and hung like a train behind. She moved with a simple dignity that was inexpressibly charming and her fine delicate features at once reminded the spectator of the profile of the Princess of Wales.

The service proceeded according to the ritual of the Roman Catholic Church. When that part of the service arose in which the Bishop asked the Prince, "Louis Philippe Albert d'Orleans, veulez vous prendre Marie Isabelle Francoise d'Assise Fernande Louise Fernande, ici presente, pour votre legitime epouse? &c., the Prince turned and gravely bowed to the Queen mother for the consent which was given to him with a kindly smile and bow before he turned and answered "Je le veux." In the same manner the Princess turned to receive the approbation of her parent and of the Queen-mother also, before she, too, answered in the affirmative, steadily and distinctly. When the all important answers were given loudly, so that all could hear, when according to the Roman Catholic custom, the bridegroom had given the bride the gold and silver coins, typical of the worldly goods with which he endowed her, the ceremony was finished with a blessing, and the new Princess and d'Orleans, retired to the sacristy to sign the register. It was witnessed by the Duke de Montpensier, the Duke de Chartres, and the Spanish minister only.

Impressions received in youth being the most lasting, it concerns all parents to see that their children receive only such as are just and proper. None but good books should be placed in their hands.

Headquarters Army Northern Va.
ORDNANCE OFFICE, July 26, 1864.

BRIG. GEN. RUFUS BARRINGER, COMMANDING Brigade of Cavalry, Army Northern Virginia, is hereby authorized to take possession of all cavalry arms, equipments and accoutrements in the hands of civilians or other unauthorized persons in the State of North Carolina, when he is satisfied that such arms, &c., are legitimately the property of the Confederate States. All arms, &c., dropped by our troops or the enemy on their line of march, or on battle fields, or left or sold by officers on privates to persons not in the military service, are the property of the Confederate States. No person in the military service has a right to sell or otherwise dispose of arms &c., except when under the orders and regulations of the Ordnance Department.

Gen. Barringer will not delegate this authority to any one except commissioned officers of his own command, who will be furnished written copy of this authority, and with instructions to furnish receipts to parties from whom arms, &c., are taken under its provisions.

By command of Gen. R. E. Lee.

(Signed) BRISCO G. BALDWIN,
Lieut. Colonel and Chief Ordnance Officer
A. N. V.

Under this authority I desire especially to gather up McClellan saddles. These saddles were captured from the enemy. There can be no private property in them. Partizan Rangers and others have no right to sell their except to the government, which pays fixed prices for the captures.

This brigade is much in need of good saddles. Many of these we have are ruining the horses' backs. The men are losing largely and the service suffering severely by these saddles being withheld from use, often obstructed by soldiers. I appeal to all patriots to come forward and voluntarily give them up to the officers and men of this brigade in their respective localities, who will receipt for them. Those now at home, and especially all on horse details, are required to gather up these saddles, also Sharp's rifles, Colt's repeaters, and other cavalry arms and equipments, the property of the Confederate States, and bring them back into the service. All reasonable expenses incurred in this way will be repaid them.

I claim no right at present either to take or impress these arms and equipments; but I confidently expect every honest man, not in the field, to give them up. They ought to be ashamed, in a time like this to be seen with them.

RUFUS BARRINGER,

General Orders, }
No. 12. }

TOO MANY MEMBERS OF THIS BRIGADE HAVE been long absent on various pretexts. Cowards of officers and others must be urged to have these parties arrested. No indulgence should be shown skulkers and cowards while true and brave men are always at their posts. Officers absent without leave for 30 days must be promptly reported, to be dropped from the rolls. Enlisted men so absent must be advertised and treated as deserters. Those on sick leaves and furloughs must send forward at once time, the certificates of proper Boards—failing to do so, they must be reported as absent without leave. Those permanently disabled must apply for discharge, retirement or detail on light duty; and every facility must be extended them to get their papers through, and to secure them (when qualified) suitable places. No pardon can be promised deserters. But it is believed that many have been misled by the unfortunate teachings of others. In such cases (no special aggravation appearing) they may be saved by a prompt return to duty. If arrested, they cannot but expect the death penalty so recently inflicted on two of their comrades in this Brigade.

By Command of Brig. Gen. R. BARRINGER,
JAMES L. GAINES,
